ULTIMATE HEADLINE FORMULA SWIPE FILE

HOW TO GET A FLOOD OF ONLINE TRAFFIC
WITHOUT SPENDING $1 / DAY

ULTIMATE HEADLINE FORMULA SWIPE FILE

THE KEY TO WRITING POWERFUL HEADLINES:

On average, five times as many people read the headline as read the body copy.

-David Olgivy

David Olgivy is an oft-referenced copywriter, and he pegged it right. In countless heatmap studies, marketers have found that people rarely read a page in full, word for word. Instead, they scan the page for important key points. In particular, they are looking to see if the page is worth the time it takes to read (or watch/listen) all the way through. This is why headlines and subheadlines are imperative to your content marketing success.

The key to successful headlines, is to grab the attention of the reader. A headline should...

- > Address your specific audience (Being vague or general = ineffective)
- > Highlight the specific benefit or outcome they desire
- > Highlight the specific pain that your read most wants to avoid
- > Create curiosity
- > Add urgency

Another useful way that a member of KISSmetrics outlined what should be present in an effective headline is:

S – Specificity

H – Helpfulness

I – Immediacy

N – Newsworthiness

E – Entertainment value

For example:

The Best Five Minutes (immediacy) You'll Spend Today (entertainment): The Latest Tips (newsworthy) From Buffer (specificity) on Getting More Followers (helpfulness)

THE BETTERIDGE LAW OF HEADLINES

Something else to keep in mind as you write your headlines, is something called Betteridge's Law of Headlines. Basically, it means to be careful asking questions.

Created by journalist Ian Betteridge, he found a growing trend in question headlines around the web. And that is, that any headline that ends in a question mark can be answered with a "no". In a lot of cases, that's not a good thing.

For example:

Are You Tired of Your Cell Phone Plan?

This could be answered with a "no". Perhaps your reader doesn't yet realize that their cell phone plan costs more and gives them less features. A better way to write the headline would be:

Does Your Cell Phone Plan Include Unlimited Media Message To Anywhere In the World?

If they answer with a "no", then they are obviously a good match for you—and you've made them aware of what they are missing.

FORMATTING YOUR HEADLINES

Lastly, there is the question of how to format your headlines for better conversions. Here's some guidelines to follow from Unbounce:

- > Center your headlines
- > Make them big and dark, dark grey (or, when on a dark background, white)
- > Use "Title Case", aka Capitalize Each Word

- > Don't use a period at the end as such visual cues present mental stopping points for your visitors
- > Break up lengthy headlines with "eye rest" punctuation marks, such as ellipses and em-dashes
- > Consider putting quotation marks around the headline as this can draw the eye
- > Support each headline with a meaningful subhead written in sentence case, aka Capitalize the first word only
